The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (A) - You pays your money and you takes your choice.

Bunches of people have been turned loose to study foreign aid. You could have predicted the result: they're coming up with different answers. The reason is simple: the country itself has varying opinions on foreign aid.

One report has just been made by a seven-man commission appointed by President Eisenhower. A stream of reports is coming from the 11 organizations and 10 individuals assigned to the study by a Senate committee.

.The report from the President's commission-headed by Benjamin F. Fairless, steel executive-looks far less thorough than the others, and less thought through.

One thing all the groups have in common: they agree foreign aid in general must be continued. The big difference is on how to

The Fairless group, some of whose members went around the world to make their study which has been going on since last September, put a big emphasis on the role of private American investment abroad

It probably put too much emphasis on it as a replacement for United States government help to countries in need.

The President's commission has a tendency to speak in broad generalities, stating broad principles, although an examination of details would have been more instructive.

For example: It says investment abroad by private American capital is "far more desirable than investment by government." And no doubt it might be a way of relieving the drain on American taxpayers.

SWEDEN DENIES RUSS CHARGES

Union has accused Sweden of smuggling spies into Russia in cooperation with U.S. intelligence services. Sweden branded the charges as absurd.

Russia delivered a note to the Swedish Foreign Office yesterday claiming the Soviets have caught 14 of the alleged spies, tried them and given them undisclosed sentences. Pravda, Izvestia, and the Moscow radio publicized the case extensively today.

Diplomats in Stockholm believe the Soviet charge may have a double significance - part of a crackdown on restless peoples of the subjugated Baltic states of Estonia, Lithuania and Latvia, and a countermove to offset two current Swedish trials of persons charged with spying for Russia. Sweden expelled three Soviet Embassy officials in connection with the Swedish spy charges.

Financial Difficulties

Britain met on schedule its first five payments on principal and interest, but last year it ran into financial difficulties in the wake of the Suez Canal closure.

Last December the British made a payment of $57,180,000 on the principal, but asked for deferment of an 82-million-dollar interest payment, also due at that time. They set aside the 82 millions pending outcome of their request. Eisenhower asked Congress to approve a proposed amendment to the 1945 agreement, as negotiated by Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey and the British. It would permit the British to postpone the payments, rather than cancel them as had been suggested at one time.
